

Public Registration Front-End Concepts

Five design directions for the Tara Barko Maritime Services online enrollment portal — one brand palette, one information architecture, five ways of wearing it.

01 Harbour Deep	02 Beacon
03 Sail Split	04 Manifest
05 Coastal	– Brand foundation & recommendation

Project	Scope	Date	Status
Public Registration + Internal Integrated System	Courses · Enroll Now · Track Enrollment	15 August 2026	For selection

Every concept draws from the same palette, the same mark and the same two-tab structure. What changes between them is proportion, density and tone of voice — not the brand.

Primary mark — full lockup

Typography

System sans throughout. No web-font download, so the portal stays fast on a mobile connection at the pier.

Train with Tara Barko.

Section heading — 19px / 800

Body copy runs 13–14.5px on screen with a 1.45 line height. Field labels are 12px semibold; document numbers use a monospace face so APP-2026-0006 stays legible.

Colour discipline

The two brand colours do different jobs. Mixing those jobs is what makes a two-colour brand look cheap.

ROLE	COLOUR	APPLIES TO
Structure	Blue	Headers, headings, navigation, data, fee figures, timelines
Action	Orange	The primary button on any screen, the active Enroll tab, required-field markers, the reference code
Warning only	Orange	Low seat counts — never as decoration, so it keeps its urgency
Never	—	Orange body text, orange backgrounds behind long copy, two orange buttons on one screen

Information architecture — identical in all five

TAB	CONTAINS
Courses	Hero, open schedules with live seat counts, searchable course catalogue
Enroll Now	New Enrollment — 3-step wizard (schedule → details → review) Track Enrollment — reference code + last name, status timeline

Track Enrollment sits inside Enroll Now rather than in the top bar: an applicant looking for it has already enrolled, and looks where they enrolled. Staff sign-in lives in the footer — it is not a public destination.

A dark blue command bar over a deep blue hero. Reads as a regulated institution rather than a shop — closest in feel to MARINA and agency portals a seafarer already uses, so it inherits their credibility.

- AUTHORITATIVE
- FAMILIAR TO SEAFARERS
- ORANGE RESERVED FOR ACTION
- STRONG ON DESKTOP

Courses tab — accreditation above, then the catalogue: course title and duration, nothing commercial.

Where it wins

Trust. A seafarer handing over an SRN, passport number and next-of-kin details wants the page to look like an institution. The dark bar also holds the brand mark at maximum contrast.

What it costs

Heavy on a small screen — the dark hero eats the fold on a phone. Needs the hero to collapse to two lines under 640px.

Step 1 — the selected schedule takes an orange ring, the only orange on the screen besides the button.

Where it wins Conversion and comprehension. Big type and one obvious action per screen suit a concept using Beacon on a phone, one-handed, between errands.	What it costs A full-bleed orange band is a lot of orange. It risks reading as a promo page rather than an accredited center, which matters when you then ask for a passport Page 1 of 1 number.

A diagonal split echoing the sail in the mark, with an orange keyline on the seam. The most designed of the five — it looks current, and it makes the brand shape do work rather than sitting in the corner as a badge.

Step 3 — review left, money right. The fee disclaimer sits under the number it qualifies.

Where it wins

Memorability. Of the five this is the one a seafarer would recognise again, and the only one whose layout references the mark.

What it costs

The diagonal has to be rebuilt as a horizontal band under 820px or it shreds the text. Roughly a day more front-end work than 01 or 02.

Minimal chrome, ruled underline fields, monospace document numbers. Designed around the truth that this is paperwork — so it behaves like a well-set official form rather than a landing page wearing a form.

Numbered sections, underline fields, no decoration. The whole form fits one desktop screen.

Where it wins

Speed and legibility. Numbered sections match how the registrar reads a file, and the underline treatment survives printing — useful when an agency wants a paper copy for twelve seafarers.

What it costs

No warmth and no persuasion. A first-time visitor who has not decided to enroll yet gets nothing here to help them decide.

Generous spacing, 14px radii, a pale blue gradient and a wave seam. Designed phone-first on the assumption that most applicants arrive on mobile data — the desktop view is the phone view given room to breathe.

- MOST APPROACHABLE
- BEST ON MOBILE
- LOWEST ANXIETY

Phone views — the wizard and the acknowledgement with its reference code.

Where it wins

Completion rate on mobile. Large touch targets, one group per scroll, and a form that never feels like an interrogation despite asking for thirteen fields.

What it costs

The softest brand read of the five. Rounded pastel UI is the visual language of consumer apps, not accredited training centers.

CONCEPT	FEELS LIKE	STRONGEST AT	WEAKEST AT	BUILD
01 Harbour Deep	An institution	Trust at the moment you ask for SRN, passport and next of kin	Mobile — the dark hero eats the first screen	Low
02 Beacon	A campaign	Turning a Facebook click into a submitted application	Credibility; a lot of orange for a regulated service	Low
03 Sail Split	A modern brand	Being remembered, and using the mark structurally	Responsive cost — the diagonal must be rebuilt under 820px	High
04 Manifest	An official form	Speed for repeat users and agencies; printing	Persuading anyone who has not already decided	Low
05 Coastal	A consumer app	Mobile completion rate across thirteen fields	Reading as an accredited training center	Medium

Recommendation — 01 Harbour Deep for the shell, 04 Manifest for the form. The two screens are doing different jobs and deserve different treatments. The Courses tab has to earn trust and sell a seat, which is 01's strength. The Enroll Now form has to be filled in accurately by someone on a phone who has already decided — which is 04's. They share the palette and the mark, so combining them is a change of density, not of brand.

What to borrow regardless of the choice

FROM	BORROW
02 Beacon	The three-number stat strip. It answers "is there a seat for me?" before the visitor has to search for one.
03 Sail Split	The review layout — details left, money right, with the fee disclaimer directly under the figure it qualifies.
04 Manifest	Numbered form sections. A seafarer on the phone to the registrar can say "I'm stuck on section 4".
05 Coastal	The phone layout of the acknowledgement screen. The reference code is the single most important thing the portal ever shows.

Constant across all five — do not trade these away

These come from how the system actually works, not from taste.

Two tabs only	Courses and Enroll Now. Track Enrollment is a sub-tab inside Enroll Now.
Live seat counts	Shown net of applications awaiting approval, so the portal never oversells a batch.
Orange means act	One orange button per screen. Orange elsewhere only for required markers and low seat warnings.
The fee is an estimate	Stated next to the figure, every time. No payment is collected on the website.
The reference code is the hero	Largest element on the acknowledgement screen, and printable.
Emergency contact is required	Before any practical or sea-survival exercise. The form says why.
